

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

STORM RECOVERY IN IOWA

Volunteers in Mission are working across the United States and around the world to assist persons and communities as they recover from disasters of many kinds.

Becky Wood serves as the Directory of Recovery for the Iowa Conference in response to tornadoes and floods in 2008 as well as flooding that continues in 2010 in many parts of the state.

The community of Oakville is located near where the Iowa River joins the Mississippi River in southeast Iowa. They have a vision to rehabilitate 25 homes in the next five years so that a total of 300 residents may return to the community after floods in 2008 nearly wiped out the town.

The Block by Block program in Cedar Rapids has plans to rehabilitate 253 flood-affected homes on 19 separate city blocks. Teams are working on more than 80 houses this summer.

These initiatives and others like them are made possible by generous donations of time, equipment, and money from United Methodist people in Iowa and throughout the entire country.

Volunteer registration and other information about recovery efforts can be found at www.stormrecovery.org.

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

STORM RECOVERY IN IOWA

Volunteers in Mission are working across the United States and around the world to assist persons and communities as they recover from disasters of many kinds.

Becky Wood serves as the Directory of Recovery for the Iowa Conference in response to tornadoes and floods in 2008 as well as flooding that continues in 2010 in many parts of the state.

The community of Oakville is located near where the Iowa River joins the Mississippi River in southeast Iowa. They have a vision to rehabilitate 25 homes in the next five years so that a total of 300 residents may return to the community after floods in 2008 nearly wiped out the town.

The Block by Block program in Cedar Rapids has plans to rehabilitate 253 flood-affected homes on 19 separate city blocks. Teams are working on more than 80 houses this summer.

These initiatives and others like them are made possible by generous donations of time, equipment, and money from United Methodist people in Iowa and throughout the entire country.

Volunteer registration and other information about recovery efforts can be found at www.stormrecovery.org.

